

Befriending New Technologies: Partial Bibliography

Divorce Lawyers Turn Facebook Into Case-Winning Goldmine (June 2, 2010) www.abovethelaw.com

Ethics of “Friending” Adverse Witness, LegalTech, (September 1, 2009) www.law.com

Facebook: State bar opinions address information gathering (November 2010) www.abanet.org/media/

Facebook is “Unrivaled Leader” for Online Divorce Evidence, Survey Says (February 12, 2010) www.abajournal.com

Facebook causes one in five divorces, says law firm December 22, 2010 www.thefirstpost.co.uk

How Lawyers are Using Social Media for Real Results www.Mashable.com

Jennings v. Jennings, S.C. Court of Appeals, 7/14/2010

Lawyers’ Ethical Stumbles Increase Online, Law Technology News, www.law.com

LinkedIn CEO: “Keg Stands” will protect us from Facebook invasion, (November 17, 2010) <http://venturebeat.com>

New York State Bar Association, Committee on Professional Ethics, Opinion 843 (9/10/10)

Philadelphia Bar Association Professional Guidance Committee Opinion 2009-02 (March 2009)

Seeking Clients Via Facebook? In Ky., Bar May Regular Social Media Comments (November 18, 2010) www.abajournal.com

Social Media or Snake Oil: Does Social Media Measure Up to the Hype? www.abajournal.com

South Carolina Judicial Department, Advisory Committee on Standards of Judicial Conduct, Opinion No. 17-2009 “Propriety of a magistrate judge being a member of a social networking site such as Facebook”

State Bar of California Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct, Formal Opinion No. 2005-168 “Does a lawyer who provides electronic means on his web site for visits to submit legal questions owe a duty of confidentiality to visitors who accept that offer but whom the lawyer elects not to accept as clients, if the attorney disclaims formation of an attorney-client relationship and a “confidential relationship”?”

State Bar of California Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct, Formal Opinion No. 2001-155 “What aspects of professional responsibility and conduct must an attorney consider when providing an Internet web site containing information for the public about her availability for professional employment?”

Updates in Michigan Family Law (blog): Facebook & MySpace: Is it ethical for lawyers to tell clients to change, delete? www.JeanneHannah.typepad.com